Biversions Witch Brens the Monotony of the Hours "On Post"—Dodging the Unindaman—Pleasant Calls in Saloons and antiers' Rooms—Pleasant Perquisites—People Who Have "Palls."

The Filter of the Ectalog World:

I have read your interviews with policemen and the answers to your question as to whether a policeman's life is a happy one.

I have been four years on the "force." I have been four years on the house half-grown boys one. To in tanke, I saw some half-grown boys one day-sit from one of the private schools for the intermission. They were playing pranks that were harmless enough until the idea seized that me half hem to be the can alone, when the hop who shold it marched boldly down and askel what I said. I rapeated my order that he should not meddle with the ash-cans. He was impertinent, told me to mind my business and attend to the servant girls; he was a gentleman and could at them to to mind my business and attend to the servant girls; he was a gentleman and could at the to the can alone, when the boy who shold it marched boldly down and askel what I said. I rapeated my order that he should not meddle with the ash-cans. He was impertinent, told me to mind my business and attend to the servant girls; he was a gentleman and could attend to his, and so forth.

He stood close up to me, facing me impudently, and I flicked him on the check with a white eotton glove I held and told him to shut mp or I would arrest him as disorderly. He threatened me with "breaking," took my number and went of him a rage.

He proved to be the son of a rich brewer, who complained of me. I was brought before the Commissioners, reprinanded and changed to another past.

My rest trouble was for ordering a liquor desier to coe at 1 o clock at night. He did not do it. The next Sunday there was a crowd at his corner, and I sgain ordered him to close, as his place was keeping the crowd. He complained to the Captain, and the next night I was ordered to a post down by the river.

I did not meddic again for a long time, until one Sunday we were or exed to arrest all Italians seiling flowers on the street. Seven were arrested, but I managed to keep those on my post moving and did not make an arrest. I was off post at 1 o'clock. There were not so many of them about during the morning.

The same nights 1/2 I was on my night post and one of the saloons was running full blast with the shales up. I had ordered the dealer before to put down this shades on Sunday. He had to the to mind my business or he would have my scalp. This being Sunday Fordered him closed. He told me to go to — and the occupants of the saloon jeered, so I told him to get his hat and I took him to the station-house. He was released at the Captain's orders and I ordered back to my post, The next might when I went on at 3 my post was acain changes.

So you see my life for the first six monthis was not as happy one.

so you see my life for the first six months was it a happy one.

I had some trouble with my mates, too, as I had some trouble with my mates, too, as I had some trouble with my mates, too, as I had some trouble with my mates, too, as I had some or post at the point furthest from the attendance. The man relieving me refused come the whole length of the post, and got ad, and I was warmed by some of them that I as rather fresh, and I gave it up.

My life norw is an easy one, as I can explain, the first place I get $100 a month salary, then I worked saws stone-mason I could not get much even if I got work every day, and that I ever-lid—what with strikes and delay after one abefore I found another. Now, I have every ther day off duty from 6 P. M. Then the days were are first, what we call a short day, then long day. Friday last was my long day, I let on at 6 in the morning and remained until At 1 in the site moon I went on again until p. M. At 12 at night I went on until 6 Satury morning, then was off till 6 Saturday even.

At 12 Saturday night I wenthome to sleep, and went back at 8 A. M. Sunday for my short day. I was off again at 1 Sunday atternoon and did not go on a can until 12 at night, then off at 6 this (Monday) morning. To-day is again my day off.

my day off.

So Finday I had two hours' duty in the morning and five in the afternoon, and from 12 to 6 Saturday A. St., making eleven hours' duty in twenty-four hours. Then Saturday off, and only six hours' duty from 6 to 12 at night. So that makes seventeen hours' duty in forty-eight.

the unday, my short day, I had from 8 to 1 in a morning and 12 at night to 6 Monday raing, making eleven hours again in that only four, and the next day again a day off, owe average the hours work, rain of shine, do that, strikes, fights, &c., with an occapital prisoner in court taking time on the off contor hot, strikes, lights, acc., with an occasional prisoner in court taking time on the off days.

Well, this seems, with the risks and ealis to fire, concerts, weddings and receptions, hard worked to I am now able to get a pretty good thing sat of it.

Forcestance, I go on at 6 this evening. There is a little house for a watchman at some new buildings on my post, and as instead of sleeping I have been on a racket this morning and writing thus afternoon I shall go in there and sleep shall 7, 30, when I get ont to the corner that the roundsman will pass. They always pass at the same corner and about the same time, except when it storms, and then they generally don't come. After the roundsman comes the sergeant, so by 2, 30 I can go into some girl's house and get a little lunch and stay until 11 or 12, or go back to the watchman's house.

To-morrow I shall probably be on post. If so, I go out at 8 to way to 8, and I generally go in a saloen to chat and for a "set-me-up."—I am always thirsty in the morning—or else get a bite of lireakfast, or sometimes get shaved.

At I I meet some one for a chat or drop in somewhere until 2, and then get to the street the counseman goes through. That standing around may not be over until 4, and sometimes something prevents their rounds and we are given what we call a "standing," which is very hard, for it keeps us out until 6 for fear of being caucht: but usually the "Rounds" and the serveant have gone by 3, and we can go "under cover "until 0.

recent have gone by 3, and we can go 'under ver' intil 0.

I have played cards from 3 to 6 with a friend the back room of a saloon or in a friend's playet have spent the time with indies, or gone back, in a saloon or friend's house. When we go on at 12 at night all of the felws going in one direction drop into a raloon of drink together for an hour and then get out til the 'rounds' of the officers, and then we have our places of going to bed. I go in the sequent of a large 'flat,' where the fanitor atches the fires all night, four of us stay were every other night from three to four ours.

ex are very nice at this flat. I have taken estimate and contest there when I knew the casts and roundsmen had a Grand Army club meeting and would not be around. I id not not take off my uniform and put my clothes about 8 o'clock, and go out to all the even are d the evening.

If Grand Army pionic night four of us the posts around went to a saloon four as from my post and played cards from 7

I often wonder that citizens who see these bings den't complain, but they don't seem to notice or mind it. One man in our pistoon was n as run over by a horse car. His leg was rushed, and no one seemed to know how to top the breeding, nor how to ring for an abulance. So, as they could not find the astrolman, some one ran to the hospital.

The scribilines got there just as the patrolman had, and so nothing was said and he helped put in the tourniquet and get the man in the ambusines but the man had lost blood for three-instance of an hour and was too feeble for opertion and died in an hour after arrival at the lospital.

LIGHT PAVORITES.

E. J. Henley and Miss Mary Hampton, a story of whose tudden marriage was told exclusively in Time Eversing Wonton, with the statement that he had given up an encarement in "The Shanty Queen" and she the hope of appearing in "Shenandoah," all for Hymen's sake, seem to have awakened sufficiently from the joys of their San Francisco honeymoon to be able to look after business. They are both to appear next week in a production of a farce-comedy entitled "Kieptomania," by Mark M. Stord, which was sketched in this column when it was produced in London. Mr. Henley will be starred under the management of Mr. Keogh, who, being an Englishman, has great faith in "Kieptomania."

Charlie Dickson has left "A Possible Case" commany and returned to the city. Mr. Dickson says that he hungered for New York and had to come back to appease that hunger. He was on Broadway vesteriday looking dapper and crisp as ever. Indeed, if Mr. Dickson cannot look dapper, who in the world can? An actor who can claim the fraternal relation with a tailor has opportunities which are distinctly denied to the rest of the profession. What Keicey would be with a sartorial brother is something which the most vivid imagination could never picture, for he is a host without one.

Very little is heard in this city of the company that is playing 'The Old Homstead' on the road without Denman Thompson. It is said, however, that the New York run has not been without its effect on the travelling organization, which is doing an a tonishingly large business. Archie Bord who is appearing as Uncle Josh Whitcomb, and who will be remembered by New Yorkers for his clever work with Neil Burgess in 'The County Fair,' is said to give a good performance, copring closely that of Deman Thompson. In this case imitation is certainly a virtue.

The two reindeer used in the production of "The Extles," declined very persistently to make their appearance last night, but were induced to go or. The animals are rapidly acquiring the characteristics of the members of the profession, though "The Extles" is doing a large business, and there was consequently no reason in this case for the objections of the reindeer.

THE POET'S TRIUMPH.

BY THE EVENING WORLD'S POET. "Gimme a pen!" the poet cried. With tragic gesture, pale, wild-eyed; ' Gimme a pen and you shall see Old Mount Parnassus scaled by me." Gimme a pen!

Gimme a pen! this rolling sphere Shall silent stand, and wait to hear,

The mighty thought that seeketh birth, And swells abnormally my girth. . Gimme a pen!

Gimme a pen, and qui-With which to trace this ...d rous think; This grand original idee Which somehow has got into me. Gimme a pen!

Gimme a pen, some ink and paper, This inspiration soon may taper. My name emblazone i high shall be, Immortal fame awaiteth me. Gimme a pen!

All things were brought, the poet's eve Rolled like a dying duck's on high. As through his hair his fingers slipped, The waiting pen he tightly gripped.

Halted this mighty, rolling sphere, And clust'ring stars drew twinkling near, While all the univer e stood still To catch the thought his soul did fill. With hopeless eyes the pen he views, While rummaging his brain for clues To that clusive, wondrous thought That somehow in his brain had caught. He objurgated earth and air.

And vasty deep in his despair; From the gray matter in his head The thought sublime, alas, had fled! The grim and cynical old world A forceful observation hurled, Then on its axis once more turned,

And poets ever after spurned. Then twinkled merrily the stars, While Jupiter nudged the ribs of Mars;

And laughter, soft as fountain's play,

The universe took up the strain, Till round and round it pealed again, And spheres unknown to man awoke To join in laughter o'er the joke.

The jolly waves of glad uproar Beat boist'rously 'gainst heaven's door; Saint Peter stared, and then averred It was the best joke he had heard.

He told it to the angel gnard. While smiles relaxed his visage hard, They told the happy souls within, And beaven was rife with laughing din

Thus, from the laws of sure defeat The poet plucked a laurel neat, For though that thought escaped his head, He tickled heaven and earth instead.
